about the true stories in
Chicken Soup for the Soul:

Stories for a Better World!

Zimone, age 8

"In the story 'The Endless Time Out' (p. 90) when the mother said something sweet, the baby changed. That made me think that when the person is mad and they're having a bad day, maybe a few words might change them and be in a happy mood?"

Emmett, age 9

"I would recommend this book for 4th and 5th graders because it talks about better ways to act in a world that sometimes is not kind."

Katelynn, age 10

"I enjoyed reading one story already, and I am looking forward to reading more."

Katherine, age 11

"I would recommend this book to people who may be having problems -- like Henry and his parents -- with anger, and could find solutions inside the book." (Story: "If You're Angry and You Know it, Remember Henry!" p. 278)

Devin, age 13

"Good stories! One of the stories showed that one decision can change your whole life."

Lisa, Devin's mother

"This was a great book of stories to read with my son and mother at times to bring back to focus on the important things in life. Also, great learning lessons for me and my son. Thank you so much for introducing this book to all of us."

Maxine, Devin's grandmother

"An inspiring group of short stories that teach young people critical thinking skills and reminder for older people. Timeless quotes that teach and inspire from famous people."
